What lack the tender flowers?
A shadow is on the sun;
What lack the merry hours,
That I long they were done?
Only two emiling eyes,
That told of joy and mirth;
They are shiring in the skies,
I mourn on earth!

What lacks my heart, that makes it So weary and full of pain.
That trembling hope forsakes it, hever to come again?
Only another heart,
Tender and all mine own,
In the still grave it lies;
I weep alone!

THE BALLET.

Concerning Nudity and Indecency. We copy the following from a recent article

It cannot be asserted by the severest moral-st that the ballet, though it partakes of the diaracter of a pagan feetival, is, of necessity, indecent or immodest, and that it may not be chiaracter of a pagan festival, is, of necessity, indecent or immodest, and that it may not be made the source of much inno-ent and refined enjoyment. It is a mistake, too, to suppose that the ballet has exclusive attractions for men. Educated and accomplished women, both young and old, love to see a handsome girl, handsomely dressed or draped, displaying herself in the graceful figures and movements of the dance, upon the same principle that they admire a picture, a poem, a flower, a tree, a landscape, or anything in the works of God or man that appeals to the sense of beauty, proportion and harmony. And if one such young woman is a beautiful sight, fifty or a hundred or more of such women dressed dlike, or slightly differing for the contrast of color, are part passu, a beautiful spectacle, when they perform their gyrations and evolutions upon the stage, and neither by gesture nor sign nor suggestion convey, or seek to convey, to the mind of the beholder any impression but that which springs from the legitimate exercise of their art. The scanty drapery of the ballet girls, when not dancing, or the ease and grace of dancing, but something else—is no offence either against modesty or good manners. Yet ever since the days of Martial, and perhaps long before, the Prudes, Puritans and sterner moralists of society, have seen in the public dance a means for the corruption of public manners through the eye, which they have never wearied in denouncing. Addison, in the article in the eye, which they have never wearied in de-nouncing. Addison, in the article in the Spectator, from which extract has already houses to the great, and alterward to the minor theatres, and, finally, have invaded and taken possession of the music halls.

Spectator, from which extract has already been made, has a good-natured fling at the etage dancers of his day when ballet was as yet unknown. "I," he says, "who know nothing of women but from seeing plays, can give great guesses at the whole structure of the fair sex by being innocently placed in the pit, and insulted by the petticoats of the dancers—the advantages of whose pretty persons are a great help to a dull play." The costume of the modern ballet of thirty years ago, when Taglioni's graceful skirts barely displayed the knee, was objected to by the prudes of both sexes. In spite, however, of objections, good-natured and otherwise, the ballet has sontinued to grow in popularity, and the skirts of the dancers to grow less: and such entertainments have spread from the Italian opera houses to the great, and afterward to the minor theatres, and, finally, have invaded and taken possession of the music halls.

Bailey's lovely statue of "Eve at the Fountain," in which there is not the slightest pretence of drapery or concealment of the divine form, fresh from the hands of the Creator, is purity itself; and any one who sees impurity in it has the impurity in his own heart. In the same manuer, there is no indelicacy in the display of the pretty bare legs of little maidens of from four or five years old, or in the bare feet and ankles of the bonny Scotch lasses, innocent alike of shoes and stockin as and of evil intent, though there would be 'undecency in the display of a naked leg and foot in the streets of London or Edinburgh by full grown damsels, who made the display for a meretricious purpose. There are statues and statuettes to be seen all over Europe in which nudity is as complete as it is beautiful; but when such statues or statuettes are imitated by purvey or of obscenity, and crowned with a modern bonnet, wrapped in a modern shawl, and encased in modern stockings, and nothing else, their vile intention becomes apparent, and they fall properly under the cognizance of the police. The display is not indecent per se, as when an actress of high attainments and genius, in default of an actor of truthfulness and talent enough to undertake the part, appears as Romeo; any more than it is indelicate or improper for a man to hide the form by appearing in petticoats to play the part of one of the witches in Macbeth. The intention is everything, just mee; any more than it is indelicate or improper for a man to hide the form by appearing in petticoats to play the part of one of the witches in Macbeth. The intention is everything, just as it is in killing. If you intend to kill, you are a murderer, and deserve the murderer's fate. If you kill in self-defence, and in a just and patrictic causs—like a soldier—you are not blamable, but virtuous. In like manner, the santy drapery of the ballet for the purposes of art, and art alone, is no offence against good taste or good manners; but if the billet girl—not for the sake of art, but for the sake of attracting lewd attention—overdoes the the scantiness and betrays the immodesty of her mind by her motions or gestures, she commits an offence, and ought to be hissed from the stage which she disgraces.

If at any place of public entertainment the undress of women is of a character to deter men from introducing their pure-minded mothers, wives, sisters, or daughters to witness the performance, such place of entertainment is doomed to bankruptcy. It may drag on a precarious existence for awhile, by keeping within a hair's-breadth of the penalties of the law that prohibits the immodest exposure of the person; but the world and the world's opinion are against it, and it must go the way of all anachronisms and offences against the public conscience. But let us not, in the outery against short petticoats, commit treason against an art that ministers, like other arts, to the gratification of the sense of beauty. All true art is like music—it cannot be indecent for improper in itself, and is only made so by the extraneous association of words and thoughts that come out of the things observed.

"To the pure all things are pure." "In dancthoughts that come out of the mind of the observed, and not out of the things observed. "To the pure all things are pure." "In dancing," says Bir Richard Steele, "all the charms of an agreeable person are in their highest excreise; every limb and feature appears with its reflective grace. As all art is an imitation of nature, so this is an imitation of nature in its highest excellence. The business of dancing is to display beauty, and for that reason all distortion and mimicries, as such, are what raise aversion instead of pleasure.

The dancers on our stage are very faulty in this kind; and what they mean by writhing themselves into such posture! so it would be a pain for any one of the spectators to stand themselves into such posture? as it would be a pain for any one of the spectators to stand in, and yet hope to please those spectators, is unintelligible." And it is in this respect that reform is, in our day, still more needful than it was in the days when Addison and Steele were the arbiters of taste and the high priests of criticism.

is capable of being elevated, and no higher; and this, for his own sake. It seeks to educate hi n to the extent of both his means and his brains.

It welcomes the immigrant from whatever shores he may come, be it from Germany, England or New England. It welcomes all—sall who bring means, brain, or brawn; money mind, or musole; and with them an honest intent to better the home they choose.

It distinguishes, with the clearest cut of all possible distinctions, between the immigrant and the carpet-bagger. The difference between them is toto coclo—the distance between Heaven and hell.

It brands the carpet-bagger wherever he is found, as an intruder, an interloper—a plundary as cowardly as he is vile, that comes to dupe the negro into ruining the white man.

It stigmat zee the scalawag as werse than the carpet-bagger, in that to all his bruial villary he adds treachery.

This is the new regime.

It test the dead past bury its dead; and makes the best of the present, looking at the same time to a glorious future.

ORCHILLA GUANC..."AA." a fine Bird Guino, rich in Phosphates and Alkaline Salts. Price 315 ash. 540 time.

PERTURIAN GUANO—Warranted pure, and always on hand. Furnished at market prices for cash Analysis of Rhodes' Standard Superphosphate of Lime.

The above analysis indicates a Manurial Superphosphate of Lime of the highest grade ordinarily found in the American market. Its large amount of Soluble Phosphoric Acid supplies an active nutriment for the development and maturity of the fruitage. The Sulphunc Acid which it contains, by chemical affinity with the elements of most soils contribute to its Fertilizing Properties. To show its best effects, this Superphosphate should be applied under and in contact with the Seed, and with a moderately shallow covering of soil.

G. H. WILLIAMS, Assistant Chemist.

Inspector, Savannab, Chatham County, Georgia, February 13th, 1869.

We guarantee that every package of RHODLS' STANDARD SUPERPHOSPHATE shall ally come up to the above analysis. B. M. RHODES & CO.,
